C. L. Goodwin, assistant quartermaster to General Hampton, though a native of Virginia and of Revolutionary ancestry, had been thrown by fortune in Columbia, S. C., when hostilities commenced between the North and South, hence he naturally volunteered, joining the Columbia Artillery, a light field battery, as a private, which organization was the first in the State to offer its services to the Governor, Hon. F. H. Pickens.

On the 31st of December, 1859, orders were received to report at Charleston. They were subsequently ordered to Fort Moultrie, from which Major Robert Anderson, a gallant officer of the United States army, had, after spiking the guns and dismantled the fort, made his flight to Fort Sumter. With the Washington Artillery, of Charleston, they garrisoned C. L. Goodwin, assistant quartermaster

In May following his company was re-lieved from duty on the coast, and or-dered to Columbia. Whereupon Mr. Goodwin was promoted to a lieutenancy, alwin was promoted to a lieutenancy, almost simultaneously with which he was appointed on the staff of then Colonel Wade Hampton, with the rank of captain, which honor he at once accepted, and upon reporting for duty was ordered to Montgomery, Ala., then the seat of government of the Confederate States, to confederate the Servicery of War in regard fer with the Secretary of War in regard to arming and equipping the "Hampton Legion," which was promptly put in the field, and pretty much at the expense of Wade Hampton, upon whose staff it was his fortune to serve four years in the field, surrendering at Greensboro' with a chief whose history is a poem in itself. CAPTAIN GRATTAN.

Captain Charles Grattan, chief ordnance Captain Charles Gratiff, was educated at home and at Ridgeway, Albemaric coun-ty, and the University of Virginia. He ty, and the University of Virginia. He farmed till 1859, when he was elected to the Legislature, and again in 1861, while at Harper's Ferry with the army. He passed the ordnance examination and was assigned to Cabell's Battalion of Ar-tillery. Then he was assigned to take charge of Field Park, Second Corps and charge of Field Park, Second Corps and then to the cavairy corps as chief of ordannee on the staff of Generals Stuart and Hampton. He went to the bar in Staunton in 1871; was for six years Su-perintendent of Schools for Augusta coun-ty, and in 1887 was elected Judge of the Hustings Court of Staunton. In 1888 ap-pointed by the Board of Agriculture Com-missioner of Immigration, and in 1894 was re-elected Judge, which position he now holds.

A MOST DESPERATE WOUND. The Fearful Injuries Received by

General J. Snowden Andrews. One of the most prominent men here to participate in the reunion is General J. Snowden Andrews, of Baltimore, who has the reputation of having been the most desperately wounded man in the Confederate army to survive his injuries.

GENERAL J. SNOWDEN ANDREWS. General Andrews was shot three times during the war. but the wound that rendered him somewhat of a celebrity was received at Cedar Run, August 9, 1862, when, by the explosion of a shell, his entire stomach was shot away, and he was completely disembowelled. He was ordered to the rear, where, after an examination of his wound, the surgeon stated.

As a companion picture to OUR HE-ROES AND OUR FLAGS, which was eagerly sought after by the patrons of the Dispatch, we have gotten up one to be called OUR LOST CAUSE. It is a beautiful design in colors, with President and Vice-President of the Confederacy and the last Cabinet, together with Jack son and Lee. As likenesses, the portraits cannot be surpassed, and under each is a fac-simile autograph. There is an exact reproduction of the scal of the Confederacy, together with a picture of the "Merrimac," or "Virginia," and a stand of Confederate flags. The work is done in the highest style of art, and will prove a most attractive souvenir. The picture, highly illuminated, and ready for framing or malling, may be now had at our

THE DISPATCH'S REUNION EDITION The best souvenir of your visit to with you is a copy of the Dispatch's 24-page Reunion edition of the 30th instant. It is a "live" paper, and full of interest for to-day, yet time cannot stale its infinite variety of matter pertoining to our city and our cause. Years and years hence, our cause. Years and years hence, whoever possesses a copy will refer to it with curious interest, and in the light of its bright pages live over again the Confederate Reunion of 1896.

It is the best guide that you could possibly have to assist you in seeing Richmond. One of the sweetest pictures that it gives is a view of the President's Mansion ("White House of the Confederacy"), taken during the war, before the hill in front of it had been built over, when Mr. Davis could sit at his window and see the flashing of the guns at Mechanicsville. It also contains a full list of the surviving generals of the Confederate army. It has a page of letter-press and pictorial descriptions of the design adopted for the monument to President for the monument to President Davis. It is crowded with por-traits of distinguished Confederates, iralis of distinguished Confederates, living and dead. It is a cyclopedia of information about Richmond during the war. It is full of readable matter bearing apon the organization of the United Confederate Veterans. It has a unique puzzle, in which the portraits of Davis, Lee, and Jackson play an important part. Its pictures are the largest and best ever printed here, and never before were so many and such costly ones published in any single issue

CHICAGO PRODUCE MARKET.

CHICAGO, July 1.—Very little of yesterday's enhancement in grain values remained at the close to-day, and were it not for the apathy of traders in general, prices would have, perhaps, declined further. Yesterday's strength left traces of its force in the market, and at the start this morning a fairly firm tone prevailed, but very soon thereafter the course changed, and from that time until the close the selling disposition was paramount.

close the selling disposition was paramount.

September wheat opened at from 57 to 57 1-4c., sold between 57 1-2 and 56c., and closed at the inside—3-4c. under yesterday. Cash wheat was weak and 1-263-4c. lower.

Corn.—The trading did not assume any particular prominence or importance. The action of the market was identical with that of its more influential neighbor—wheat—but, as the volume of trade was lighter the range of prices was naturally narrower. Prices made a slight advance early, but later weakened, and declined. September corn opened at 28c, sold between 28 1-8 to 27 5-8c, and closed at 27.5-8927 3-4c—1-861-4c, under yesterday. Cash corn was 1-4c, higher, closing easy, with the futures.

Oats responded more readily to the weakness communicated by the other markets than to any display of strength. The business was restricted and of material significance.

The provision market dragged along, and was easier. A larger run of hogs than had been expected imparted a heavy tone at the start, and the market was unable to recover later on. The market closed lower.
